

Political and Economic Analysis

I have been involved in the design of survey instruments and the conduct of sample surveys in Indonesia, on reproductive rights; in Pakistan, on charitable giving and on secondary school students' justifications for violence to redress perceived injustices; and in Thailand on economic and working conditions of apparel and footwear workers.

I have advised the U.S. Congress (House Committee on Ways and Means) on internationally recognized labor standards in trade agreements and advised the U.S. Department of State (Bureau of Democracy Human Rights and Labor) on international labor diplomacy.

I have conducted economic and political analysis for reporting to agencies and departments of the governments of Canada, India, the United States, and the United Nations as well as for for-profit and non-profit associations in the United States and in South and Southeast Asia. These include such organizations as the Asia Monitor Resource Center of Hong Kong, the National Council of Applied Economic Research of India, and the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Worker Rights Consortium of the United States.
